

Jerome: a family to heal his wound.

Not all abandoned children at the Queen of Peace orphanage easily get adopted. One such child is Jerome. He is one of 13 children the sisters are trying to place in a good home. Jerome is still waiting for a family to adopt him. He is now nine years old. He was only two when he was abandoned by both of his parents. Since his parents left him he has had no permanent home. Jerome has lived off the kindness of one neighbor who was good enough to take him in, and find families that he could live with for a little while. No one could take him in permanently because everyone is too poor to have another mouth to feed for a long period of time.

This has left Jerome with a deep emotional scar. Abandonment is one of the worst cases the sisters see at the orphanage, but are fighting to find Jerome a forever family.
